«Quando cheguei em Salvador eu não conhecia ninguém, Mariella foi a primeira pessoa que me chamou pra participar do show dela.era uma noite com o grande Marku Ribas, e ela teve essa generosidade. Foi ela também a primeira a cantar uma música de minha autoria (Duas Cidades) e anunciar meu nome, como autor, em público». When I first moved (from the country side) to Salvador, Mariella was the first person to invite me up on stage and pass me the mike.
The great Marku Ribas was also present that night with his band, and she had the generosity of inviting me on stage .She was also the first one to perform one of my songs live (Duas Cidades) and to announce me to the audience as a songwriter.

She is one of Bahia's most mesmerizing and influential performers. Her music, a fusion of Bahian afro beat, Jazz and Soul, draws on her African heritage but flows in a distinctly original direction, as once said by Remy Kolpa Kopoul. She was one of the first female black songwriters who dared to write and sing songs not related to the local Carnaval revelry, alongside Rosa Passos, who came 3 decades earlier.

Her strong, powerful, elegant vision also manifests in her lyrics, which show deep concern on racial, gender and environmental issues. With poetic sophisticationshe resists against race and gender stereotypes and surpasses the often superficial speech of black identity activism. Despite her early involvement in the international music scene, she still lives and works in Salvador, where she has been struggling during the past decades to expressing her artistic views in a rather suffocating insipid than democratic musical scene, unlike most Bahian artists who have moved to São Paulo to escape the local "off-circuit" isolation. She has collaborated with multiple Brazilian and international artists such as Sting, Eberhard Schoener, Hermeto Pascoal, ArtoLindsay, Carlinhos Brown, Chico César, Moreno Veloso and Wagon Cookin'. Her band has a tight rhythm section: brothers Angelo and Gilberto Santiago (bass and drums), with her on vocals, driving a multi-canal loop station.

Elle est brésilienne, chanteuse, auteure, chercheuse et productrice d'événements culturels. En activité depuis les années 90, d'abord à Bahia puis en Europe où elle participe et collabore à plusieurs projets multimédias. Sa musique et ses performances établissent des passerelles entre les traditions afro-brésiliennes et les mouvements esthétiques contemporains. Cette démarche lui vaut d'être remarquée rapidement dans l'arène culturelle et de remporter plusieurs prix importants au Brésil,(Braskem, Itaù Rumos Cultural, Conexão Vivo et Natura Musical). En quête de nouvelles formes, Mariela cherche à dépasser les barrières de style dans une danse où le geste et la pensée se complètent avec bonheur.Durant deux décennies sa discographie réunit plus de vingt disques parmi lesquels des albums solos, des compilations, et plusieurs collaborations avec des artistes brésiliens et internationaux (l'une d'elles avec Sting). En 2017 parallèlement à sa carrière artistique elle commence une recherche sur l'univers des chanteuses et auteures de MPB (Musique Populaire Brésilienne) à partir des années 30) dont la représentante la plus célèbre est l'internacional Carmen Miranda, en aillent pour boute d'investiguer la participation de chanteuses et auteurs- compositeurs noires dans l'histoire de ce genre musical. Son projet de Master intitulé « Voix noires et Afro-indigènes du Nord et Nord-Est : genre, race et géopolitique dans la MPB » vient d'obtenir une bourse du FAPESB<sup>1</sup> (2021-2022) et se trouve actuellement en voie de développement. Ce projet intègre une partie des activités du Master interdisciplinaire Culture et Société de l'institut IHAC<sup>2</sup> de l'Université Fédérale de Bahia. La conclusion de cette recherche est prévue pour le second semestre de 2022. Au-delà du mémoire, elle comportera des entretiens réalisés avec les artistes sur leurs lieux de vie.Fondation de

É cantora, compositora, produtora musical, atriz e pesquisadora, em atuação desde os anos 1990. Sua atividade tem se concentrado na Bahia, expande-se para a cena internacional, principalmente na Europa, onde tem apresentado projetos autorais e participado de espetáculos multimeios. Sua música e performance integram referências afro-baianas tradicionais a movimentos estéticos contemporâneos, e tem sido contemplada por premiações brasileiras relevantes na area cultural, tais como Prêmio Braskem, Itaú Rumos Cultural, Conexão Vivo e Natura Musical. Nela estão presentes a busca pela diversidade e pela transcendência de barreiras estilísticas, traçando um caminho onde dança e pensamento seguem irmanados. Ao longo de duas décadas sua discografia reúne mais de 20 fonogramas entre álbuns solo, coletâneas e colaborações com artistas brasileiros e internacionais, uma delas com o cantor Sting. Iniciou em 2017,paralelamente à carreira artística, pesquisa sobre o universo das cantoras e compositoras negras da MPB - a música brasileira moderna, pós 1940 -, que teve como patrona internacional o ícone Carmem Miranda. Seu projeto de dissertação de mestrado, intitulado "Vozes Negras e AfroIndígenas do Norte e Nordeste: gênero, raça e geopolítica na MPB", acaba de ser contemplado com a Bolsa Fapesb (2021-22 ) e se encontra em fase de desenvolvimento, integrando parte das atividades do mestrado interdisciplinar em Cultura e Sociedade no IHAC, Universidade Federal da Bahia. Além da dissertação, a pesquisa resultará em uma série de podcasts com entrevistas realizadas presencialmente.,

A cantora e compositora Mariella Santiago apresenta novo projeto solo, com suporte de uma loop station entre outros recursos eletrônico-digitais.

Essa é mais uma atração da #MostraSescdeArtes pra por na agenda!

>>>Amanhã, 28, às 19h30<<<

A ideia do trabalho é unir técnicas vocais como beatbox, be-bop e variações regionais do canto popular brasileiro para compor os arranjos, utilizando a voz não apenas como solista, mas como elemento fundamental nas bases rítmicas. No show a cantora combina faixas pré produzidas à criação instantânea, no estilo «quem sabe faz ao vivo».

Para a Mostra Sesc de Artes 2020, @mariella_santiago convida os músicos Gilberto e Angelo Santiago, parceiros em produções anteriores, e o produtor musical e DJ Ivo Conceição, participações que com expertise instrumental e abertura para improvisações, trazem um brilho especial à apresentação.

Toujours le même principe, un showcase (ce sera aux alentours de 21h), avant et après, il mixe en fonction du live de ses invités. Comme disait le slogan de Nova des années 80, "C'est toujours pas pareil".

Nappy et happy : la coiffure afro émancipatrice !

En 2012, Eva Doumbla met en scène une pièce "Moi et mon cheveu. Cabaret capillaire", sur des textes de Marie-Louise Bibish Mumbu. De ses workshops (ateliers) menés depuis 2009 en Afrique et au Brésil, elle a rassemblé autour d'elle une fabuleuse équipe de femmes autour d'une question simple : pourquoi les femmes noires lissent-elles à tout prix leurs cheveux, au prix de souffrances intolérables ?

MUSICAL DE EVA DOUMBIA TRAZ NO ELENCO ARTISTAS DO BRASIL, DA FRANÇA E DO CONTINENTE AFRICANO

Le dire de la chevelure

Il y a un problème. D'emblée, quelque chose cloche. A l'avant-scène, Eva Doumbia présente ses excuses : les comédiennes que l'on voit se maquiller derrière elle ne sont pas prêtes. D'ailleurs, il en manque et si elles se préparent sur le plateau, c'est parce que « la municipalité a décidé de faire des travaux dans le théâtre. Il n'y a donc plus de loges ». Pire encore, le régisseur général a claqué la porte, la Générale était catastrophique. Ne parlons même pas des lumières.

Bien entendu, tout ceci n'est qu'un prétexte au sens littéral du terme. Un prétexte qui en contient un autre : le thème même de ce cabaret capillaire intitulé « Moi et mon cheveau ». Tout part d'une anecdote vécue par la metteuse en scène : à force de se tirer, tresser, lisser leurs cheveux crépus, les femmes d'origine africaine souffrent d'alopécie de traction, doux euphémisme pour cette variante féminine de la calvitie.

Eva Doumbia tire un fil narratif qui, à lui seul, ne permet pas de nourrir deux heures de spectacle. Il sert alors de fil narratif à des interrogations de portée plus large. Le texte de Marie Louise Bibish Mumbu s'attarde sur la violence des canons de beauté dominant, s'attarde sur la trace mémoire de l'esclavage et de la colonisation, le commerce international du cheveu humain ou du droit à la mobilité comme un des droits de l'homme.

De ces douleurs et questionne-

Des douleurs et des questionnements, la pièce ne fait pas une thèse. Elle les passe en revue en exploitant à fond la forme ments, la pièce ne fait pas une thèse. Elle les passe en revue en exploitant à fond la forme du cabaret. Danses, chants et monologues intimes sont tressés ensemble. Sans cesse, le point de vue varie du plan large qui embrasse les mouvements du monde au plan serré d'une adresse politique ou de l'évocation d'un souvenir intime. La forme très linéaire de la revue impose son rythme et la mise en scène pèche un peu par cet excès de déclinaison. Il y a des pointes justes et des moments creux. Mais le jeu d'emboîtement scénographique permet de passer sans peine des extraits documentaires à des instants dansés et des confessions intimes aux chants en toutes langues. C'est par ces voix mêlées que la pièce dien(ne)s et in à tour brillar sensuelles et sort enchanté ployée.

Personagem: Talking With Arto Lindsay

By Patrick Ambrose

After 30 years of making some of the Western Hemisphere's most adventurous music, you'd think a guy could take some time off. Patrick Ambrose talks with the ex-DNA leader about art, music, and the origins of his unique guitar style.

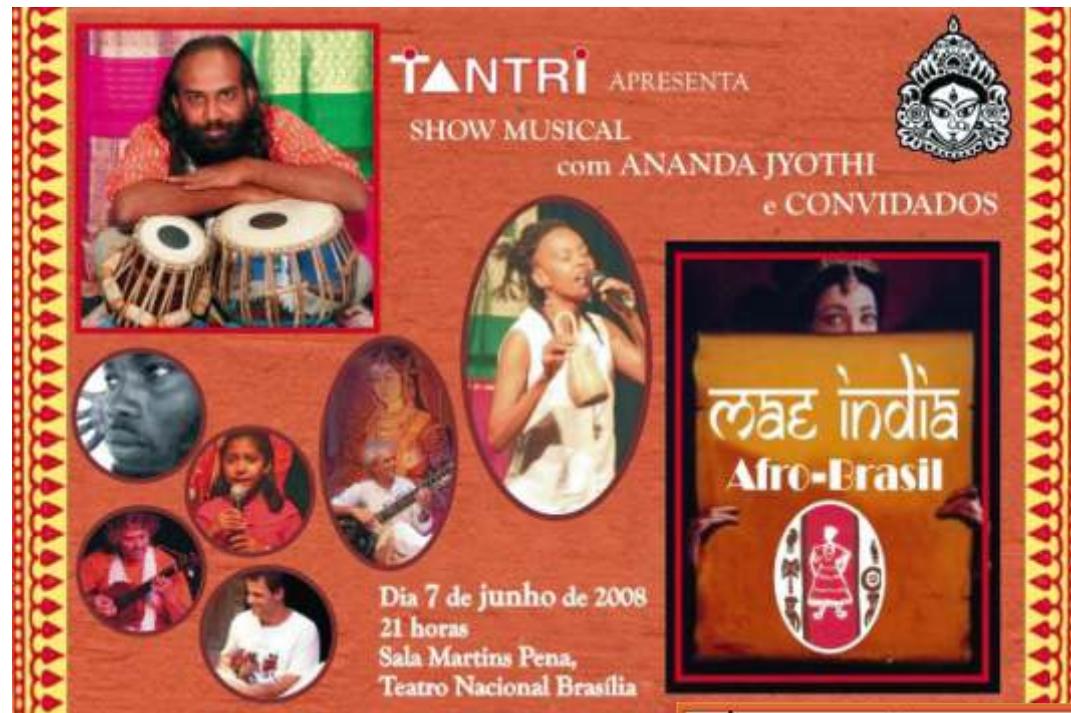

"We really didn't try to figure out what the audience wanted and try to give it to them. That wasn't the point at all. It was more like we wanted to give them something that they really needed. We didn't see much point in Being another Iggy Pop or Bruce Springsteen."

PA: You just returned from Brazil this past week. Were you working on something while you were there?

AL: I had been working some, but mainly just living there for the past year. I'm trying to get a bunch of record projects going.

PA: With anyone in particular?

AL: A woman named Mariella Santiago. A really great singer. We're doing some demos so that we can look for a record company. We're doing some demos so that we can look for a record company.

With an almost cybernetic look, the singer for Wagon Cookin performed solo for the first time in our city. Her presence was breathtaking and her sensual voice delighted us with the most Soul aspect of Brazilian music. A great start...

Sundaryalahari - The Wave of Bliss

Store > CDs > Wave of Bliss

Out of Salvador, the capitol of Bahia, the lightening hot kitchen that gave us the original samba, capoeira, Caetana Velosa, Gilberto Gil, Olodum and Ilé Aiyê, comes Sundaryalahari fusing Middle Eastern, Brazilian and the great American and British traditions of Funk, Rock and Blues.

From 2006 -2008, Layne Redmond had been teaching her hybrid techniques on Middle Eastern style tambourine to a core group of cutting edge percussionists in Salvador, Brazil. There she met Tadeu Mascarenhas, a young recording engineer, producer and genius keyboard player who became her co-producer on four projects. Besides the amazing core percussionists: Gil Santiago, Paulo Silva, Moisés Lama and Ubaldo Oliveira, they brought in the outstanding guitarist Fred Barreto and fabulous singer Mariella Santiago.

"I've listened to your cd three times in a row and really love the different textures of each of the pieces. It's really quite refreshing to hear percussion-based music which is evocative rather than provocative. That allows more reflective space for the imaginative listener, and creates a deeper sense of communion. On this remarkable release Ms. Redmond conjures Divinity with an inspirational animation of the Muses!"

ARTIST PROFILES

Artist Profiles: Mariella Santiago

Born in Salvador, Mariella Santiago had an early interest in music. She was influenced by her father, singer and composer Messias Santiago. Soon she developed her own style, combining jazz with samba and Afro-Bahian chants.

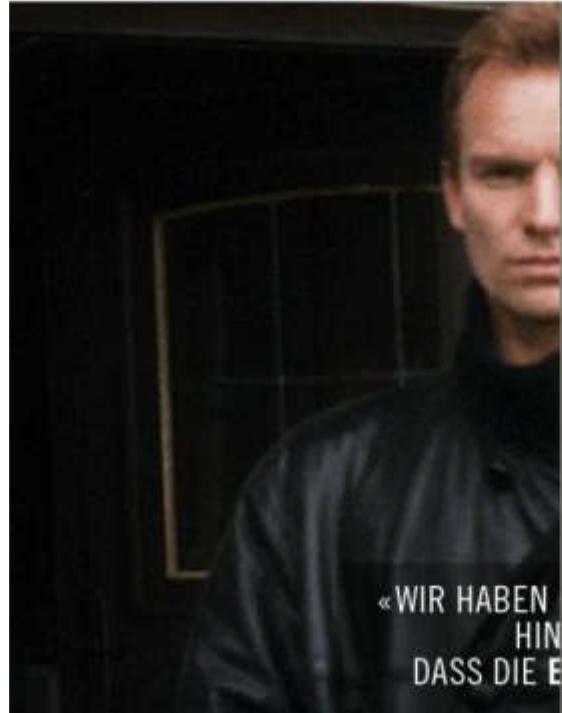

Her first recording came out in 2002 and it featured renowned guests such as Hermeto Pascoal, Gerônimo and Carlinhos Brown.

In the period of 1992 through 1995, Mariella performed standards and bossa classics, as well as Bahian music. In 1997 she developed the Virtopera project, together with German composer Eberhard Shoener. She also participated in the opera Black Beauty, inspired by Puccini's Madame Butterfly.

- ¿Qué nos podéis hablar de ellos?

Que estamos muy felices de haber contado con ellos...

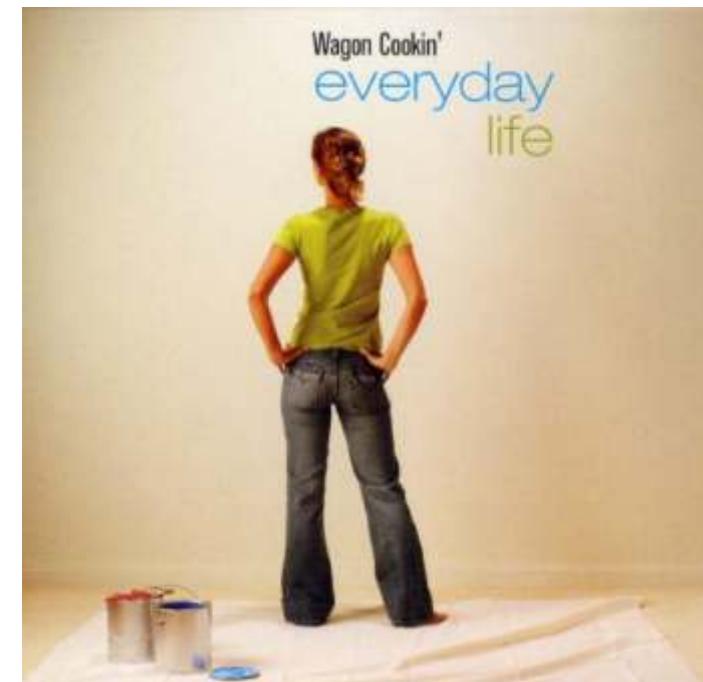

desde Mariella Santiago una gran voz y persona que

además domina idiomas,

Wagon Cookin' are a couple of dudes (they're brothers) from Spain with a heavy jazz infatuation. The name of the group is pretty cool to their sound because when you listen to the songs, it does sort of inspire you to... cook and have a good time! They've got all sorts of touches to their music - latin vibes, naturally, a bit of bossa, some natural Brazilian ambiances and it's really just a good listen.

But I think my favorite track was "Birds"... it's such a simple track. Nice effects, an easy guitar, Mariella Santiago's voice, very soft percussion. If you hear this song, you can close your eyes and imagine paradise. "When You Smile" was a rather nice track to close the cd with too.

VIRTOPERA DIE WELTWEIT ERSTE INTERNETOPERA

Eberhard Schoener versteht das Internet als einen Weltbühneninnenraum, der die Möglichkeit bietet, sich -frei von Zwängen- Stile der verschiedensten Kulturen vorurteilsfrei anzueignen und neue künstlerische Formen durch die eigene Kreativität zu entwickeln. Die virtuelle Figur „Cold Genius“ -eine Manifestation des Internets- hat sämtliche Informationen: er kann jedoch nicht ordnen und werten. Und er hat keine „Seele“. An den vier Schauplätzen der Live-Events nimmt er Kontakt zu den Menschen auf, um über den Weg der Musik Gefühle zu „erfahren“

Artist Harnesses New Media For 'Virtopera'

Schoener Uses Net To Webcast Opera Performances, Interact With Audience

This issue's column was written by Kai R. Lofthus, Billboard's European new-media correspondent.

IN RECENT MONTHS, the public focus on technology's impact upon music makers has concentrated on the perceived threat it poses to the established record business. But at least one veteran artist—German "musical adventurer" Eberhard Schoener—has been wholeheartedly embracing new media as an essential part of his art.

Signed to BMG's Munich division, keyboard player/composer/arranger/conductor Schoener has been recording since 1969. "Virtopera," however, is probably his most ambitious undertaking to date. It involves performing the four acts of his latest opera, utilizing different musical genres, in venues on three continents over a four-month period. Each of the performances is Webcast live on the Internet at virtopera.com. BMG will release the finished project on CD and DVD in 2001.

Technology, according to Schoener, is "both a challenge and a dangerous thing." As an artist, he adds, "I don't want to judge whether it's good or bad. But I do think there's a danger of losing [touch with] our real world to follow the virtual world."

The first act of "Virtopera"—featuring co-musicians based in London,
